Providence Cedars-Sinai has so far held seven Town Hall Meetings to update the community on the strong preparedness of the medical center and the effects COVID-19 on the West Valley.

“I was very grateful that the hospital had all the medical technology I needed. And the ends truly speak for themselves. I’m well. I’m certainly not happy I got sick, but my treatment could not have been better.”

Recovered COVID-19 patient Peter Saphier, who was in isolation care for more than two weeks at Providence Tarzana Medical Center for treatment of an aggressive coronavirus infection.
